

Now semi-retired, Mary Mitchell Lundeen is using her extra free time to be a member of the Writer's Studio. As a Licensed Psychologist, Mary is writing short stories to share memories from her 35 years of working with children with behavior problems and their families. One of Mary's specialty areas is working with children who display callous and unemotional traits. Mary has written many professional pieces, so the transition to fiction is a steep but exciting learning curve. If her writing develops to the point where she feels ready to write a novel, this would be the focus of her fiction.
